— How do you assess the economic situation in the world and the global financial crisis?

— I believe we are approaching a new — and very dangerous — stage of the global financial crisis. The monetary authorities have flooded the world with new assets for the purposes of saving the banking and financial sectors. But the industrial sectors are stagnating. No significant reforms in the financial sector have been made. The economy is still run for a short term financial gain instead of a long term development. I'm confident that the so called "recovery" in the USA is nothing more than a typical public relations campaign. One of the most indicative evidences of the weakening of the US economy is the trade balance deficits which since 2000 total $8,600 billion. The total trade balance deficit is significantly bigger reaching $10,500 billion.

— What's the situation with the economy in the European Union?

— The European Union also suffers from serious economic troubles. It has copied the US monetary policy, having increased the bank's assets. It hasn't given new loans to invest as it was planned. But the main problem of Europe is the lack of political unity that would help it to play a more independent role in the world. As a result, Europe doesn't have an opportunity to act independently even as far as the sanctions against Russia are concerned. Having said that, I would like to warn everybody, including Russia, against any sentiments regarding the possible breakup of the EU, hoping that reaching a direct agreement with Berlin, Paris or Rome would be easier than with Brussels. Disintegration of Europe would lead to additional destabilization of the international situation which is already fragile.

— What does the "Trans-Eurasian 'Development' Belt" mean for you?

— It's a project of the new industrialization program that can lead the economy out of depression. To implement this project, new long-term financial instruments are required. The Russian government could officially recognize the 'Trans-Eurasian 'Development' Project" as strategically important and could make it a priority goal for this country.

— What would be the main advice that you could give to Russian President Vladimir Putin?

— He should carry on surprising the world with his unexpected projects and decisions in the area of new technologies, space research, cooperation and security.

“ THE MAIN PROBLEM OF EUROPE IS THE LACK OF POLITICAL UNITY THAT WOULD HELP IT TO PLAY A MORE INDEPENDENT ROLE IN THE WORLD ”

Out of generosity, he should carry out important projects for the benefit of the mankind, even if his partners are not ready for immediate cooperation. And he should give priorities to developing the BRICS alliance which is the core of the future international system.
